Freedom for You

I am not bound by any person or circumstance. I am free with the freedom of Spirit.

Our July fourth holiday celebrates freedom. Rev. Dorothy Pierson once said to me, “Cherie, you will never be free from any experience until you are first free in that experience.”

Have you ever been bullied, betrayed, treated unjustly or been the brunt of someone’s anger, addiction, or ignorance? Have you ever made a mistake or hurt someone? When we refuse to forgive, we bind ourselves to people and events with chains stronger than steel. Yes, it’s appropriate to acknowledge hurts. But no matter how justified we believe we are in feeling angry, we are not free. In holding a grievance, we are keeping ourselves in a cycle of pain that affects our health, happiness, and well-being.

To set ourselves free, some hurts need only some imaginary scissors to snip away the hurt. Maybe you live with someone who drops their clothes on floor. You like things in order. As you pick things up, you think, “I work too. I don’t expect to come home and be a maid.” Irritation builds as you slam-dunk the dirty socks into the laundry basket secretly imagining you’ll dye your mates underwear bright red. With some prayer and forgiveness, snipping scissors can usually cut you free from these negative feelings.

A more serious concern may take bolt cutters. Maybe a parent criticized you for your entire life. An effective remedy is to use imaginary bolt cutters to tame your self-talk and stop the story. Don’t sever the relationship but sever the way you hold it in your mind and heart. Give up the self of you that has been abused, was betrayed, was once unpopular, grew up poor, was rejected, messed up, used to be thin, was wrongly accused, did not get the love.

Living life through the lens of what’s wrong strips you of peace and joy. And while your grief can seem justified, ultimately it costs too much. No grievance is worth the pain you must carry to keep it alive.

As you grow toward God, you come to know there is a Spirit in you that remains whole and intact no matter what circumstances you walk through. Your core essence is untouched by any hurt or harm. This July fourth step into the freedom of forgiveness!

Did you hear that?????

Our sound technicians are instrumental to our Sunday service and the various events we host at Unity of Auburn. "Our guys" are often the first ones in the building on Sunday morning preparing to make everything run smoothly and on time.

Ensuring our microphones are on, power point is pointing, video and graphics are edited and displaying, and the service is recording for YouTube,+++ plus so much more; takes skill and dedication.

Thank you, gentlemen! We are truly blessed by your reliable, capable, and loving service. And, next time you pass by the sound booth give them a smile and a high-five!

Spending Time This summer has started typically busy for me. I always expect this season to start slow and be filled with lazy days and vast tracts of unassigned time. It might be that I am still 12 years old, waiting for school to be over and the season of exploring the American River, riding my bike all over the neighborhood, and building incredible creations in my back yard.

But time has moved on and instead of catching frogs and tadpoles I am doing all of the adult things in life and feeling a need to return to my life of yesterday. Sometimes I remember my last days in Y.O.U. and how I felt as I transitioned into college and away from the utopia that is Youth of Unity. I made it my policy to always treat every situation with a little bit of Y.O.U. code of conduct. This way can fade over the years however, and sometimes we need to return to the fountain for more inspiration and reminders. When I am spending time with someone or in a situation that makes me wish I was somewhere else, I remind myself to be in the moment and appreciate what my life journey is presenting to me.

Several years ago while teaching Sunday school, I came across a children's book "The Three Questions" by Jon J. Muth, (based on a story by Leo Tolstoy). In the story a boy travels around asking three profound questions which are ultimately answered by Leo the tortoise (probably why I have a colossal pet tortoise living in my yard). The answers are as follows,

"There is only one important time, and that time is now. The most important one is always the one you are with. And the most important thing is to do good for the one who is standing at your side."

Wow! Sometimes messages come when you are not expecting them! I always remember these instructions, like keeping your boat on a compass heading, especially when I am impatient or wanting things to be different. Living in the moment is my paramount objective. This doesn't mean I don't guard my time doing things that transport me to being in the land of creation and child like discovery. But when I am having fun I can be fully open to the experience because I have prepared myself in each moment before for being in the moment now and appreciating all those around me who are also on their journey.

I hope all who read this don't feel like they also need a tortoise to receive this wisdom. My tortoise is nothing like Leo in the story. He really just wants me to give him lettuce or squash .
